Dear J.B.,

These are duplicates of stories I'd received earlier. Last week I made copies of these and more and sent them to Jerry. I suggested that Jimmy and you ought to see them but I left this up to Jerry. However, the situation is deteriorating rapidly because they are that irrational and counterproductive. So, when these came in today's mail I decided to send them to you whether or not Jerry does later.

I'm not trying to involve you in anything against your desire.

I've been at the point where I rarely write Jimmy - it had been perhaps a year before I did last - and can't keep taking time for Jerry, who either will not think or is incapable of it except in the most unjustified and grandiose self-concepts.

I'm sorry for what can happen to them.

It can be to both because Jimmy does still have some prospects.

Sincerely, Harold Weisberg 1/10/77
